Wednesday, 2nd December 2026

Doors open at 5.30pm, lecture starts at 6.00pm

Though a relatively new member of the Company, Liveryman James Lodge had already made a significant contribution before his sad and untimely passing in April 2025. One of his commitments was to deliver a talk based on his day job at global law firm Linklaters and he was greatly looking forward to sharing his experience and passion. In remembrance of a remarkable man, colleagues of James from Linklaters have completed his preparations for a talk about risks to business caused by changes to the environment, such as climate change and increasing temperatures. They are pleased to be delivering this talk in their new London HQ, a project with which James was also involved. We hope that many of you will join us for both the talk and for conversation over refreshments that follow.

The event is free and by invitation only. Places are limited and will be available on a first come first served basis. To reserve a place please register using the link:
